

Fall Session Begins October 1st

Is your teen

- *Struggling in social situations?
- *Having difficulty interacting with peers?
- *Having trouble understanding and responding to non-verbal cues?

Individuals who have social learning challenges and solid cognitive and language skills from grades 6-12 can participate in small groups rich in social learning opportunities and facilitated by speech-language pathologists, occupational therapists and teachers. Adolescents are placed in groups with others of similar ages and social communication learning styles. Concepts from Social Thinking® and other similar methodologies are incorporated to address different aspects of social interactions such as sharing space with others, relating to others, and reading and responding to non-verbal/situation cues.
